

One thing is for sure is that we all know that we need a roof over our head. In most cases folks end up having to pay either Rent for this roof or a Mortgage payment, unless of course you have a wealthy family that can offer you FREE or Reduced Rent. The point is, we ALL have to pay for a roof over our heads.

Real Estate has always been a Long Term Investment. The real question is, do I really want to pay RENT for the rest of my life? Generally, a home makes financial sense if you are going to live in it for at least three, four, or preferably five years. When you buy or sell you need to consider the costs involved in buying and selling that home, from appraisal fees and home inspection to real estate commissions.

When people lose money in the real estate market it is usually because they did not own it long enough, they sold too quickly. This usually means within the first 3 years of the purchase. You cannot depend on making any real profit in real estate in the first 3 years. In fact, the market may fall after you buy your home. The longer you own your property, history has shown that you can be sure it will have increased in value when you come to sell.

Real estate has proven to be one of the most stable long-term investments there is. It is your guarantee of retirement security. Overall, it is far better to own your own home than rent. Not only for the pride of ownership but because it is your only long-term hedge against inflation. With rental rates increase constantly, there is no guarantee you will be able to afford them as the years go by.
