

Move to Panama & Move to Paradise

Panama is finally starting to catch on as a top-notch destination for expats as people are becoming more interested than ever in moving to Panama. Some people are looking to retire overseas, some are looking for a life on the beach and some are simply looking to move abroad and start a new life. Nevertheless, Panama has something to offer everyone !

Moving to Panama for the Perfect Retirement...

A large portion of the expats moving to Panama have chosen this tropical paradise as a destination for retirement. Panama offers an incredible pension program for retirees, which, combined with a high quality of living and the affordability of everything from real estate to health care, has created one of the top retirement destinations in the world.

Panama offers a very comfortable retirement, in part because the nation is much more developed than most visitors expect. Many are shocked by the modernity of Panama and the clusters of skyscrapers that define Panama City's skyline. All of the amenities you could wish for are all readily available in Panama.

Not only will you have access to all of the luxuries and comforts of your current life, but you will also have access to more of them because of Panama's lower cost of living. By retiring in Panama, you will enjoy the benefits of a developing economy where you can still take a taxi across town for under $4, get your haircut for $5, or enjoy dinner with a bottle of wine at a trendy Panama City restaurant for under $20 a person. There are also lots activities for you to enjoy, from jazz clubs to art openings to English-language theater performances. You may be wondering what you will do when you retire...but when you retire in Panama, you will never find yourself bored.

Moving to Panama for Its Gorgeous Beaches...

One of Panama's primary attractions for everyone from retirees to young surfers is its many miles of beautiful coastline. A move to Panama is almost like moving to an island due to the tremendous amount of beachfront, both Pacific and Atlantic.

Panama, a Convenient, Modern Destination...

Many favor Panama as a destination because it is so close to the United States. There are dozens of quick, direct flights going to and from the U.S. daily.

Panama is also far more developed and modern than most people anticipate. The idea that moving to Panama means a move away from a First World country, could not be farther from the truth. People who move to Panama can typically find the same luxuries and amenities that they would hope for anywhere else, and can even afford more of them due to Panama's low cost of living.

Panama encourages retirees and other expats to move to Panama by offering a very straightforward visa program. For those who have decided to move to Panama, there are a variety of available visas, including the Tourist Pensioner Visa, the Private Income Retiree Visa, the Person of Means Visa, the Small Business Investor Visa, and the Forestry Investor Visa.

If you have a family, Panama is an excellent place for kids of all ages. Panama offers a wealth of outdoor and cultural activities that will ensure that your children will never be bored. Looking back, your kids will undoubtedly appreciate that their move to Panama was an incredible, childhood-enriching experience.

It is easy to take your pets with you when you move to Panama. There are some basic requirements, including an in-home quarantine requirement, but overall, the process is quite simple. Moving to Panama with your household goods, on the other hand, is slightly more complicated and expensive, so we typically recommend that you buy furniture and other household goods in Panama. Besides, it is doubtful your furniture will be suitable to your new tropical environment.

Once that Decision Has Been Made...

You will need to learn a little bit of Spanish. There is a lot of English spoken in Panama, so don't allow a lack of Spanish fluency to keep you from moving here. But do familiarize yourself with some of the most basic and essential Spanish phrases.
